

Martina Paul is General Secretary of the International Commission on Illumination, CIE (from its French title Commission Internationale de l'Eclairage). CIE is recognized as leading scientific authority relating to the science and art of light and lighting, colour and vision, photobiology and image technology and is the international standardization organization in those fields. Ms Paul has longstanding experience as Senior Manager in international organizations such as HOPE'87, an NPO implementing employment and training programmes worldwide. Her expertise and focus lie mainly on change management in organizations which have to compete in challenging global environments. Ms Paul holds a Master Degree of the Vienna University of Economics and Business (Wirtschaftsuniversität Wien).
